Citing influences ranging from Bjork to Billie Holliday, Judith Haustein's new single 'Freeze' is a slow dance of intricate songwriting and mysterious guitars that blend seamlessly with Haustein's unwavering, yet beautifully delicate vocals.

The jazz inspired upcomer, now based in Stuttgart, has a promising future. 'Freeze', being one of many upcoming releases is a humble brag of Haustein's creative abilities, with the artist taking Jazz studies at degree level and an MA in audio technology. Haustein has potential to explore her own skills and abilities which bodes well for the exciting upcoming artist who is challenging the mainstream, cookie-cutter sound.

That being said, 'Freeze' incorporates elements of electronic music and various production techniques that adds a fourth dimension to the track; the vocal effects added to the BV's, paired with the drawn out melodies of the lead vocal, really add to the ambience of the track.

Overall, 'Freeze' is a promising start for jazz inspired up-comer Judith Haustein, while it sets a very exciting precedent for the releases to come, making the artist definitely one to keep an eye on.

'Freeze' is out now, listen below.
