'Freeze' is the brand-new single from German composer, songwriter and producer Judith Haustein. The track is an amalgamation of styles and genres which beautifully reflects Haustein's versatile musical abilities. 'Freeze' comes some 13 years after her self-produced album Fire & Sleep which brilliantly combined glitchy sampling techniques with the warmth and smoothness Haustein achieves as a jazz songwriter.

The new single is a testament to her broad range of influences from pioneering 90s icons like Björk and Massive Attack to influential folk lyricists like Joni Mitchell. It seems to me as though capturing and building on sounds from the 90s and early 2000s is a big part of Haustein's work. Her dreamlike harmonies and creative instrumentation cultivate a nostalgic yet refreshing mellow electronic jazz sound redolent of the turn of the millennium.

'Freeze' is a more mature embodiment of Haustein's ever-evolving style, and demonstrates the artistic growth she has gone through over the years. The music video is available to watch here and amplifies the song's floaty eeriness through its disjunct imagery and beautiful use of artworks by Anne von Freyburg.

'Freeze' is out now and will appear on Haustein's upcoming album, The Flood.
